ATMOSPHERIC RIVERBOAT TRIP ON WILD RIVER MUONIO

Wearing life jackets we step into the riverboat steered by the guide. In the midst of the verdure ahead of us unfolds a blue course flowing towards the Gulf of Bothnia. Under the shining of the sun and the puff of a light westerly wind we go towards the north by turn rowing together and using the motor. As the guide points out a goldeneye, a common snipe and a sand martin we glide peacefully at a slow pace without a care in the world towards Akamella, a historical burial ground situated on the Swedish side of the river. This place is touching, as is the surrounding riverside nature with its colours and scents. The journey back has evoked me thinking about the lives of riverside folk of yesteryear rowing, fishing and reaping hay. Maybe I will go for a canoe trip on the river Muonio? Or maybe I go out to the lower course to fish for salmon?
